Shelf rental

The company rents shelves in a store built like a flea market to private individuals who want to sell their used items. The shelves are arranged to accommodate a variety of items, including clothing, books, housewares, and electronics.

The rent for the shelves is calculated weekly and depends on the size of the shelf and the location in the store. The landlords can present and label their items themselves. However, the company also offers placement and sales promotion assistance.

The company also takes care of the sale of the items and keeps a commission on the sales proceeds. It can carry out various sales promotions to draw customers' attention to each shelves, such as discounts or promotions.

By renting shelves and selling the items, the company can make a profit.
